This project sponsors underprivileged young people and children in Brazil who practice jiu-jitsu, offering them education and sports opportunities to overcome challenges and build a brighter future.

Project Impact:

Changing Lives: Over 300 young people have benefited, gaining opportunities to participate in international competitions, study English, and improve their living conditions.

Educational Support: SEDA College provides scholarships for athletes to study English online, enhancing their language skills and prospects.

Partnership with TMD House:

Success Stories: TMD House, founded by Professor Marcio de Deus, has produced several world champion athletes. Starting in an improvised space within the favela in Rio de Janeiro, Professor Marcio's dedication and perseverance have transformed the academy into a benchmark in the sport.

Comprehensive Support: Beyond scholarships, SEDA College assists with tournament registrations and provides essential gear like kimonos, ensuring athletes are well-prepared for competitions.

SEDA PEDAGOGICAL APPROACH

Our teaching method is designed to fully 'immerse' you in English. It can be a little daunting at first, but you'll be amazed at how it helps to improve your fluency. At SEDA College, we provide integrated skills classes that aim to develop communication skills by studying material relevant to our students' lives. We pride ourselves on our educational package, which is:

- Learner-centred
- Holistic
- Based on the Communicative Approach

SEDA College Teaching Methodology

At SEDA College, our curriculum aligns with the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages from the Council of Europe. The three key objectives within the SEDA Curriculum are:

1. Develop the four skills of Reading, Writing, Speaking and Listening,
2. Develop Socio-Cultural understanding and integration with Irish culture
3. Improve employability through soft skill competencies: communication, Critical Thinking, Leadership, Positive Attitude, Teamwork, and Time Management.

The academic team at SEDA recognises that students cannot acquire everything they need to learn at once and cannot learn effectively from a random collection of exercises and assignments. At SEDA, the design of all our courses starts with the same question:

'Why are these students learning English?'

This question helps focus the Curriculum and syllabus design team. Considering the world outside the language classroom ensures that the courses designed are relevant to learners.

ENGLISH LEVELS

At SEDA College, we offer a structured and comprehensive English language curriculum designed to meet the needs of all students, from beginners to advanced speakers. Our courses are carefully aligned with the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages (CEFR), ensuring a clear and progressive path to fluency. With us, you can be confident that you're on the right track to mastering English.

Our Teacher Training Course, part of the Erasmus+ initiative, offers an innovative approach to teaching and learning, promoting bi- and multilingualism in education. Originating in the 1990s, CLIL (Content and Language Integrated Learning) has become a vital part of primary and secondary education across Europe. This method integrates content teaching through a second language, enhancing subject knowledge and language skills.

To effectively implement CLIL, teachers must adopt new teaching paradigms and utilise tools and templates for lesson planning and material adaptation. This course provides the necessary training to balance teacher-directed and learner-directed activities, enabling educators to deliver engaging and practical lessons.

The Teacher's Training Programme is integral to the Erasmus+ initiative, which promotes excellence in education, training, youth, and sports across Europe. Erasmus+ offers diverse opportunities for mobility and collaboration in various educational domains, empowering individuals and institutions to enhance their skills and contribute to Europe's collective growth.
